SCOTT ORBITS AND LANDS

Liftoff Smooth And Three Orbits Are Made Today

By ALVIN B. WEBB JR.

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Scott Carpenter whirled into his third orbit around the earth today and recovery forces were set to recover him from the sea at about 12:30 p. m. (EST) 1:30 p. m. (EDT).

The 37-year-old astronaut was completing an epochal, fact-finding mission expected to lead to longer flights by other astronauts later this year.

Carpenter rose into the sky at 7:45 a. m. (EST) after the smoothest countdown in the history of the Mercury man-in-space program.

There was a moment during his second orbit when ground monitors feared it might be necessary to limit his flight to two orbits.

Started Manual Control
This fear was caused by indications that the fuel supply for the spacecraft's jet controls was being used up too rapidly. Officials ordered Carpenter by radio to switch to hand control of the jets to conserve the supply.

They decided after looking at the information transmitted from spacecraft instruments that enough fuel was left to keep the cabin pointed right for another and final orbit.

He completed his second orbit at 10:47 a. m. (EST) 11:47 a. m. (EDT).

The laconic Navy officer, reporting frequently as he sped through alternative night and day, limited remarks about himself to brief statements adding up to "I feel fine."

Carpenter and his ton-and-a-half space atop an Atlas rocket at 7:45 a. m. (EST). Five minutes later he was in an orbit so safe and stable that he could have sailed for more than the scheduled three orbits.

However, conditions in the spacecraft itself conceivably could shorten the flight. Ground monitors reported indications during the second orbit that hydrogen peroxide fuel for the craft's attitude controls was being used at an excessive rate.

If too much controls fuel is used up too soon, it would be necessary to curtail the mission. Officials said Carpenter is "well aware" that if this occurred it would be necessary to end the flight after the second orbit.

He was following nearly the same path pioneered by John H. Glenn Jr. Feb. 20. But he was performing more scientific experiments.

Overshoots Site By 200 Miles But All Is OK

By ALVIN B. WEBB

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Scott Carpenter rode three times in orbit around the earth today but overshoot his planned Atlantic landing area and gave recovery forces an anxious 40 minutes before they found him.

Space officials lost radio contact with the 37-year-old astronaut shortly after 12:30 p. m. (EST) and said it appeared he had overshoot by 200 miles the scheduled landing area 800 miles south-east of here.

But a Navy search aircraft subsequently picked up the spacecraft's radio landing beacon and followed it to find Carpenter perched in a life raft.

The plane's discovery was reported to reporters here at 1:22 p. m. (EST). The spacecraft, Aurora-7, was riding the waves near the raft.

Disenchanted Casey Up Early To Track Down Guy Who Says, "There's No Place Like Home"

By MILTON RICHMAN

United Press International

Disenchanted Casey Stengel is getting up bright and early today to track down that smart aleck who would have everyone believe there is no place like home.

Casey thinks that's just a lot of sentimental pap. In a way, you can't blame him.

He came home Wednesday night

those who were delighted to see him were the Los Angeles Dodgers, who promptly hung a 3-1 shiner on his New York Mets to climb within 1½ games of the National League lead.

Fine way to welcome a fella home, wasn't it? The inopportune

Dodgers did the job up brown.

First they let Casey sample some of that good home cooking. They even sat back quietly while many of his Glendale neighbors among the crowd of 19,983 at Chavez

Ravine greeted him and cheered him before the game.

Then The Works

Then they went out and gave him the works, coming up with a pair of runs in the eighth off ex-teammate Roger Craig to break a

1-1 tie. Ron Fairly's sacrifice fly with the bases full scored the tie-breaking run and another run came over when Frank Howard hit into a fielder's choice.

Don Drysdale stopped the Mets

on four hits, striking out seven and walking only one for his sixth victory compared with three defeats.

A sidelight on the game was Craig's valiant efforts to keep the fleet Dodgers from running wild on the bases. After Maury Wills singled in the third inning, Craig threw over to first baseman Ed

Bouchee nine times to keep Wills

from getting any ideas.

The Met pitcher finally balked

Wills to second from where he scored the Dodgers' first run on

Jim Gilliam's double.

Bucs Beat Cards

In other National League games,

the Pittsburgh Pirates snapped the St. Louis Cardinals' six-game winning streak, 6-3; the Philadelphia

Phillies handed the first-place San Francisco Giants their third straight defeat, 10-7; the Houston

Cols blanked the Cincinnati Reds,

2-0; and the Milwaukee Braves beat the Chicago Cubs, 4-2.

The Cleveland Indians defeated the Chicago White Sox, 5-4, in the American League; the New York Yankees overpowered the

while Manny Jimenez and Ed

Kansas City A's, 13-7; the Boston

Red Sox knocked over the Minnesota Twins, 6-1, and the Washington Senators downed the Los Angeles Angels, 7-2. Rain washed out the Detroit-Baltimore game.

Bob Skinner's triple with two men on base highlighted a four-run first-inning rally that started the Pirates on their way against the Cards. Harvey Haddix, the first of three Pittsburgh pitchers, was the winner and Larry Jackson

the loser.

Get Thirteen Hits

The Phillies pounded five Giant pitchers for 13 hits, including six off loser Mike McCormick. Don Demeter drove in three runs to help send the Giants down to their sixth loss in eight games.

The losers didn't help matters any either, committing four errors. Art

Mahaffey was the winner.

Ken Johnson held his former

Red teammates to five hits in gaining his second victory for the Cubs. Bob Purkey suffered his first loss of the season after winning seven straight. Carl Warwick and Al Spangler drove in Houston's runs.

Warren Spahn won the 314th game of his career, and fifth of the season with a five-hit effort against the Cubs. Roy McMillan homered for the Braves, who clinched the game with two unearned runs off Glen Hobbie in the sixth. Hobbie, who has yet to win a game, suffered his sixth defeat although yielding only five hits.

Wins Eighth Straight

Dick Donovan ran his record to 8-0 for the Indians even though the White Sox entered the ninth with a 4-3 lead. Pinchhitter Al

Laplow led off the ninth with a home run and Chuck Essegian followed with his 11th homer to keep the Tribe within a half-game of the first-place Yankees.

Donovan, nicked for 10 hits, including a homer by Al Smith, gave way to Bob Allen with two out in the last of the ninth. The loser was Dom Zanni, victim of the two ninth-inning homers.

Rookie Joe Pepitone equalled a major league record by hitting two homers in one inning for the Yankees in their victory over the A's. Pepitone's pair came during a nine-run eighth inning rally

that made reliever Tex Clevenger

the winner.

John Blanchard and Phil Linz

also hit homers for the Yankees

while Manny Jimenez and Ed

Charles connected for the Athletics.

End Losing Streak

The Red Sox ended an eight-game losing streak by raking

three Minnesota pitchers for 13 hits, including homers by Gary

Geiger and Ed Bressoud. Earl

Wilson was the winner with help from Dick Radatz in the seventh.

Rich Rollins' seventh homer accounted for the Twins' only run.

Four errors by the Angels made it a cakewalk for the Senators, who scored all their runs in the first three innings. Harry Bright drove in three runs with a triple and a single for the Senators.

Billy Moran collected four of the nine hits off winner Pete Burnside but "gave" Washington two runs in the second when he missed touching second base on a double-play ball.

SHEDDING TEARS COMES NATURALLY TO THE WOMEN

CHICAGO (AP) — Weep some more, ladies—when you're watching those tear-jerking flickers. In fact, you can weep bigger and better tears if you're under 30—and science will understand. The free-flowing tear drops are just another sign of being a normal girl, say researchers for an eye drop company.

Research shows females, cry quite naturally. But women from age 16 until about 30 have more tears than others. Far more than men in the same age bracket. Beyond age 30, the tearful battle of the sexes ceases. Males weep as much—or at least at the same rate—as females.

Keep potted hydrangeas in a cool, well-lighted spot and water twice a day when in bloom.

At the first sign of wear, stitch bias tape to the bottom and top of bath towels. This treatment will lengthen their time of use.

Keep a coffee can key on your key chain to use as a screwdriver for those small emergencies which strain patience and break fingernails.

Patch a leaky garden hose with pliable roof paint.

When buying furniture a long-range plan based on your family's needs is your best guide. Don't be concerned about what's fashionable.

Tests show it costs less to open the refrigerator door a few times for longer periods than it does to open it often for short periods.

Use a hand grater to scrape burned toast. The burned spots will rub off.

A monochromatic color scheme uses one color in a variety of its shades and tints. A monochromatic room is restful and looks larger than it is.

Wash walls from the bottom up. Dribbles of cleaning solution on dirty walls make streaks that are hard to take out. The easiest way: use a sponge and liquid wall cleaner. No rinsing.

To keep baby's rubber pants soft and odorless, rinse them regularly in a baking soda solution.

If nail polish thickens in the bottle, cap it more closely. After a manicure, try dipping a cotton swab in polish remover and running it around the inside of the bottle cap and on the threads of African violets prefer warmth, freedom from drafts and no direct sun in summer. Water from below and empty out excess water when top becomes moist. Water on foliage is injurious.

Empty or replace vacuum cleaner dust bags frequently. The machine will perform better and you may avoid a burned-out motor.

By OSCAR FRALEY

UPI Sports Writer
CANANDAIGUA, N. Y. — A dream came true today for three kids from the sidewalks of New York in the Seneca country of the Iroquois nation.

Three years ago they stood in the middle of a corn field in this lush green and gently rolling country. Then it could have been as if time stood still and Walter Butler still was sending his Indian allies down through the valleys to harass the upper New York state settlers.

Today, on those same fields, they opened a glistening $5 million race track, the first new franchise in the Empire State since 1903.

Three guys who used to play handball in the playgrounds of New York and dream of the time when they might hit it big. Which all of them did. For now Arnold Krakower is an attorney who represents many Hollywood personalities. Duke Manacher is a man in the retail coal and fuel business. And the third, Leonard Tuttleman, is a man with hotel interests in New York and Puerto Rico.

Fine Hay Country
 Three kids off the sidewalks who hit big. And who will hit it even bigger here in the fertile Genesee Valley which brags that it is finer hay country for horses than the blue grass of Kentucky or any other part of the nation.

It is a provocative region, rich in history, and in scenic splendor. Five miles from this new race track is the first of the six "Finger Lakes" which long have been a tourist attraction. There are 10 state parks where the last of the Mohicans became a legend, historic old homes whose charm is cherished in treasured furnishings and authentic architecture, summer theaters and scenic cruises.

The horse was here long ago, and again there is a connection between the past and the present. Because shortly after the turn of the century a landed lady named Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth here developed a station station for the benefit of the Army's cavalry remount service.

Cousin To Senator
 She was, in passing, a cousin to Senator James Wadsworth, whose son succeeded Henry Cabot Lodge as the U. S. representative to the United Nations. A gentleman, it might be added, who was referred to by the Soviet's Nikita Khrushchev as "that big fat potato."

Family pride aside, the Wadsworth family started the Genesee Valley trend toward breeding of the Thoroughbred mare. In this connection, the Finger Lakes race track feels that it is one of the few—if any—in the nation which really believe in the old racing hierarchy line about "improvement of the breed."

Because since this track has been in the making, the number of foals raised in this area has increased 67 per cent and already this year is up 30 per cent again.

Plans New Motel
 They aren't going to let it drop there. This new track is situated on 200 acres where the management plans a luxurious motel complete with Olympic-sized swimming pool as well as a pitch-and-putt golf course to cater to those who attend the track's 100-day meeting as well as the casual vacationer perennially attracted to this area by its scenic wonders.

The three kids from the sidewalks apparently have it made. Their plant is within whispering distance of the New York Thruway in the heart of an ideal vacationland and somewhat midway between the thriving cities of Rochester and Syracuse.

"I can't believe it yet that we're really got it going," says Krakower, the handball kid who became one of the nation's top attorneys.

Neither would the Indians.

YANKEE DOODLE DANDY—Playing with unidentified children on the White House grounds in Washington, John F. Kennedy Jr., son of the President, is placed atop Macaroni, his sister Caroline's pony, for a ride. The photo was taken outside the White House grounds with a long lens.

iments than Glenn was able to cram into his flight.

Smoothest Flight
As though proving that practice makes perfect, today's flight from the outset was the smoothest in the history of the Mercury man-in-space program. The only delay in the countdown, 45 minutes, was caused by a persistent early morning haze.

The schedule called for his descent to sea 800 miles southeast of the Cape around 12:30 p. m. (EST).

At the start of his second trip around, Carpenter released a multi-colored balloon, the size of a beachball, from what space officials called his "orbital laboratory."

The object was to find out what colors are most visible in space. This will help when the time comes in the U. S. lunar project to couple spacecraft and rockets in orbit.

At one point in his first orbit, sensing instruments reported over Australia that Carpenter's space suit was heating up a little above normal.

Corrects Temperature

But Carpenter quickly corrected this by stepping up the flow of the cooling fluid in the suit. He reported the temperature dropped from 82 to about 70 degrees. Instruments had indicated his body temperature went above 100 degrees. But that turned out to be false.

Said Carpenter, "I feel very comfortable."

The way things were doing, officials were strengthened in their hope that the next manned space flight could be lengthened to six or seven orbits, with recovery in the Pacific near Midway instead of the Atlantic.

Later on, Mercury flights will be stepped up to 18 orbits. These will be followed, late next year or early in 1964, with two-man flights up to a week in Gemini spacecraft.

Skipped On Words

Less articulate than Glenn, who kept up a fairly steady patter of talk laced with humor, the tough and wiry Carpenter skipped on words.

Like Glenn, he felt no discomfort from weightlessness, the space condition which induced nausea in Soviet cosmonaut Gherman S. Titov in his 17-orbit flight Aug. 6-7, 1961. Titov's discomfort, however, did not set in until his fourth orbit and did not become pronounced until the sixth.

Carpenter reported after going in orbit: "I am weightless. I am feeling good."

His first orbit was completed about 9:19 a. m. (EST) but space officials did not give out an official time.

He was scheduled to land in the Atlantic about 12:30 p. m. (EST) 1:30 p. m. (EDT) after completion of a third orbit.

Also Saw "Fireflies"

Carpenter reported he, too, saw the blobs of light which Glenn had likened to "a field of fireflies." Like Glenn he spotted them at sunrise over the West Coast. He attempted to photograph them. Scientists are not agreed as to just what the fireflies are, whether flecks of capsule paint or condensation droplets from the jet control system.

Ground officials told Carpenter to try a "midnight snack" of bite-sized solid food over Australia and he said he would. Glenn was limited to baby food from a squeeze tube. Today's flight will help determine astronaut diets of the future.

Carpenter's 34-year-old blonde wife, Rene, watched his takeoff from the beach. Friends reporting her happiness over the successful launching said she seemed to be "in orbit herself."

The astronaut was working his way around the world. At one point he feared he was getting behind in his chores.

His first words after he leaped into the sky at 7:45 a. m. (EST) were "My status is excellent." At the moment he was riding through thrust stresses which multiplied his 155-pound weight about 7½ times.

As his ton-and-a-half spaceship soared into orbit over Bermuda at the start of this scheduled three-orbit flight, the 37-year-old Navy lieutenant commander ironically repeated that his condition was "excellent."

It was a perfect launch. As Carpenter passed over Bermuda his fellow astronaut, Virgil I. Grisson, reported from a control station that Aurora-7 was in a safe and stable orbit.

"Roger, sweet words," Carpenter replied.

The plan is to bring Carpenter down in the Atlantic about 800 miles southeast of the Cape around 12:30 p. m. (EST) after a flight in orbit of about 81,000 miles.

Scientists said Carpenter was flying through space at 17,532 miles an hour in a path ranging in altitude from 99 miles at the closest approach to earth to 164 miles at apogee.

As Carpenter flew over Australia, information radioed from his craft indicated the temperature in his space suit was 82 degrees, a little above normal. The astronaut sought to lower it by increasing the flow of cooling fluid in the suit system. He was instructed to limit his movements in order to keep the temperature down. Minutes later the pilot reported conditions had returned practically to normal.

Carpenter was riding the same space path carved out Feb. 20 in John H. Glenn Jr.'s pioneering flight. But unlike Glenn he was reserving much of his time in flight for scientific experiments his predecessor had no opportunity to make.

Out of Carpenter's experiments will come knowledge vital to the future of U. S. manned flight to the moon and beyond.

The tough, wiry Carpenter, appearing as casual as any man on the way to work, was sealed into his bell-shaped cabin at 4:44 a. m. (EST).

Buying U.S. Savings Bonds is patriotic and profitable. Buy them regularly where you work or bank. It's an investment in freedom.

Overshoots . . .

after the smoothest countdown in the history of the Mercury man-in-orbit program.

A Navy Force search plane arrived over Carpenter's raft at 1:39 p. m. (EST).

Two para-medics, men with parachutes, leaped into the sea to attach a large flotation bag to Aurora-7 to keep it afloat and to give Carpenter any help he needed while waiting for surface craft to recover him.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration estimated that Carpenter's Aurora-7 spacecraft touched down about 12:41 p. m. about 1,000 miles southeast of here.

The 37-year-old astronaut began his flight, a fact-finding mission in space, at 7:45 a. m. (EST), after the smoothest countdown in the history of the Mercury man-in-orbit program.

At about 12:18 p. m. (EST), braking rockets to bring his craft down from orbit were fired as he approached the southwest coast of the United States.

He had reported everything aboard the craft in good condition for the fiery descent through the atmosphere to splashdown in the Atlantic.

As expected, radio contact was lost during the descent because of ionization of the atmosphere by the 3,000-degree heat generated by air friction.

Officials concluded when contact was not quickly regained that Carpenter's craft had come in at an angle which meant he had overshoot the mark.

They estimated the overshoot at about 200 miles.

Planes with para-medics aboard were dispatched to search for the craft, presumably bobbing in the Atlantic.

Officials said it would take them about an hour to reach the calculated landing spot.

After firing of the braking rockets, radioed information from the craft showed this sequence:

12:24 p. m., spacecraft soaring over the Gulf of Mexico and in contact with Cape Canaveral.

About 12:30 p. m., Carpenter was told as he sped over Florida that sea landing conditions were ideal.

By this time the spacecraft was plunging into dense layers of the atmosphere and braking sharply. Pre-estimates were that deceleration forces would multiply Carpenter's 155 pounds by about 7½ times as the craft slowed from more than 17,500 miles an hour to about 170 miles an hour in five minutes.

At the same time, the temperature built up in the air around the craft's blunt nose, blacking out radio.

The steeper, the angle of descent, the quicker radio contact would be regained. When it was not regained as soon as hoped, officials realized the spacecraft had overshoot.

At 12:35 p. m. they ordered planes dispatched from the recovery fleet "to effect a recovery."

At 12:41 p. m. (EST), with no word yet from Carpenter, one plane was within 120 miles of the estimated landing area. The planes are SC-54 air rescue craft. Their speed is about 175 miles an hour.

Carpenter had completed his first orbit at about 9:19 a. m. (EST) and his second at about 10:47 a. m.

FARM BUREAU in Action

Kentucky Farm Bureau Fed.

Quite a play made in the news these days regarding medical care for the aged or "medicare." The issue is now before Congress in the form of the King-Anderson Bill (HR4222). It has been the subject of much public debate and discussion.

Farm Bureau has long had an interest in the proper care of aged people and has devoted much study to the matter, as evidenced by our resolutions at both state and national levels. We are opposed to the King-Anderson Bill for two main reasons:

1. Because of the approach it takes to the problem and its many weaknesses and disadvantages, and
2. Because there is already a law on the books and in operation which will do the job in the form of the Kerr-Mills Bill.

Let's take a brief look at what we already have in the Kerr-Mills Bill. It was passed in Congress in 1960, and the Kentucky Legislature enacted necessary state legislation the same year to put the program into effect in Kentucky. It provided for increased federal matching funds for medical care under the federal-state old-age assistance program and authorized a new matching grant program to cover costs of "medically needy" aged persons not receiving old-age assistance.

This program provides for greater local control. It is administered at the state level and is based on need. It preserves the historical organizational structure of federal, state, county, and local community control. The Kerr-Mills plan also takes into consideration that, by 1961, 53 per cent of our "senior citizens" were covered by voluntary health insurance and prepaid plans, such as Blue Cross. To date, approximately 70 per cent are covered by such voluntary health insurance plans.

Kerr-Mills further provides for assistance to all needy persons over 65, whether or not covered by Social Security. The King-Anderson plan would not help anyone not eligible for Social Security.

NEW HOWITZER ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army announced Wednesday that it has developed a self-propelled 105 millimeter howitzer which is amphibious and can be delivered by parachute or helicopter.
